

1.3.1 Effect of colors

Reflecting the effect of colors on human life is the basis of decoration. Each color has a different effect on the mind of individual. When decorating, in the living area which emotions and effects you want to foreground you need to make the appropriate color selection.

Seating group colors should be carefully selected as the most important complement to the decoration. Seat colors selected in harmony with the floor color allow you to create integrity in areas. You should also consider the color of the walls and curtains when doing research for seat colors. In this way, you can ensure that there is no distracting detail in the living area. The more comfortable the seat colors are with the living space and the accessories is the better. If you choose a seat color in brown tones, you should prefer to distribute the energy correctly with orange and yellow colors instead of brown and wood. If you enjoy single-color predominant environments, it is important to keep in mind that the single color of your choice should not be overwhelmed in the use of multiple seats.
